About Today's Lessons

The celebration of Jesus' birth and his manifestation as the Son of God comes in a pair of seasons with common characteristics. These seasons have been particularly popular in western Christendom and were, in the past, times of such levity and rejoicing that puritans in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries sought to do away with them. In the last century, when the puritan influence had waned, Christmas became popular in this country again, but by then the churches had all but lost their memory of the old feast. As a result, Epiphany season and the intervening Twelve Days of Christmas were not part of the secular celebration. A host of new secular customs and legends developed during Advent primarily as a means of supporting business. We need to recover our own special heritage if we are to make Christmas and Epiphany central to our faith and life.

Recent historical studies have found that the original reason for setting the celebrations of Christ's birth and his manifestation on December 25th and January 6th, respectively, was related to the date of his death and resurrection. Early Christians believed that the date of Jesus' death was March 25th. They also assumed that, our Lord being perfect, even the span of his life in the world would be perfect; accordingly, they assumed that his life in the world began on March 25th also, on which date they celebrated his conception. We still use that date to celebrate the conception of Christ—the Annunciation of Our Lord Jesus Christ to the Blessed Virgin Mary. Therefore, the birth of Christ is celebrated nine months later.

The date of January 6th resulted from the fact that, in the eastern part of the Roman Empire, the calendar differed from that in the west. The date in the eastern calendar corresponding to the western December 25th was January 6th. By the time of the fourth century, the eastern and western calendars had been brought into line; and so the east had its feast—still on January 6th—twelve days after the western feast. Since the eastern feast had centered on Christ's manifestation and that in the west on his birth, the two areas began to borrow each other's feasts and ended up with the two celebrations of Christmas and Epiphany.

Underlying these two feasts, then, is the central proclamation of Christianity: the dying and rising of Jesus. Recovery of this earliest level of meaning can help us rescue Christmas from a limited emphasis on the birth of a baby; for that birth is of ultimate importance only because of the saving event of his death and resurrection.

As the church took over the Roman Empire in the fourth century, its celebration of Jesus' birth and manifestation was influenced by pagan feasts of the Roman world. In Rome, late December was the time of celebrating the rebirth of the sun god. The church took over the pagan image of the sun and, combining that image with the biblical one of light overcoming darkness, supplanted the pagan feast with the Birth of the Son of God. In the eastern church, pagan customs of Egypt were to influence the January 6th celebration. In Egypt, the pagans celebrated the birth of the god of the Nile at that time, and this water emphasis led the Egyptian and other eastern churches to celebrate Jesus' Baptism at the time of Epiphany. So a second level of meaning, derived from the pagan world's life, was added to these feasts.

THE ADVENT BANNER

Many times in the Book of Revelations, God says "I am the Alpha and the Omega", the beginning and the end. Sarum Blue, our color for Advent, symbolizes hope, expectation, and anticipation. We begin this new Church Year with Alpha, the first letter of the Greek alphabet. As we enter the beginning, we know with certainty, that there will be an end (Omega, the final letter).

Until recently, purple has been our color for both Lent and Advent. Purple, however, signifies penitence, and is out of place in the season of Advent, which is a season of looking forward, with anticipation.

In the Middle Ages, there was an Old English rite, called the Sarum Rite, on which was based the liturgy of the Anglican Book of Common Prayer. Blue, if affordable, was the color for this rite. Blue has been used for Advent, at England's Salisbury Cathedral, since the 11th Century.

Blue is Mary's color, and Advent is when we look forward, with Mary, to a time of hope, confidence, and expectation. reproduce

This shade of blue is called "Sarum Blue" or "Salisbury Blue" (Sarum being the Latin name for Salisbury). It represents the color of the sky, just before dawn, as we await the arrival of the blessed baby Jesus.
